Judicial Council explains its decision to cite Torregrosa/Amoros

by BOB VOGEL
News editor

The Judicial Council that decided to slap Miguel Torregrosa and Frank Amoros with campaign violations released its reasons for doing so Wednesday.

In an official statement, the council repeated its decision — namely, to fine Torregrosa $35 for two minor violations and to suspend Torregrosa and Amoros, without pay, until Aug. 3.

The council said that Torregrosa/Amoros were found in minor violation for failure to report $7.87 in sales tax from purchasing campaign T-shirts and failure to submit a receipt for $17.16 in campaign supplies.

It also said Torregrosa/Amoros were found in minor violation for failure to submit a validated, original sales receipt for campaign T-shirts purchased from Metropolis.

The council also cited two major violations.

The first was for exceeding the $1,150 campaign expenditure limit by $335.41. This figure is based on the fair market value of the products, since it was hard to determine how much was actually spent.

The second was for failure to post discounts received on campaign purchases and donations of campaign materials and for failure to report discounted and donated materials at fair market value on the Campaign Expense Statement.

The council did not feel, however, that the violations in total were sufficient to disqualify Torregrosa/Amoros.

First, the council explained, the total overexpenditure occurred in the primary election where the ticket lost, yet qualified for the runoffs.

Second, in the runoff elections, the Torregrosa/Amoros ticket remained within the expense limit and won the election by a margin of seven percentage points. "This pattern does not demonstrate a direct correlation between the overexpenditure and the number of votes received," the council said.

Also, the council said, the three opposing tickets who were most affected by the overexpenditures did not object, and endorsed the Torregrosa/Amoros ticket. Obviously, the council said, because there were no objections from the opposing tickets, they must not have felt they were affected.

Finally, the council felt that student voters were "competent enough not to be solely influenced by the excess publicity generated by the overexpenditure."

Artist says repetition of ideas is the key to his works success

by OLIVIA CURNOW
Contributing writer

When you see the word "Rivers" painted in huge, blue paint on the outside of the Visual Arts building and expect to walk into the gallery and see paintings and photographs of water scenes, you are in for a big surprise.

Instead, you will find drawings of naked men and women and etchings of various animals, all by figure drawing and etching teacher Robert Rivers. He received his master's degree at the University of Georgia and has been teaching at UCF since 1980.

Many of his works on display in the Visual Arts building resemble each other, such as Dancing Couple and Sleeping Man. The reason his artwork repeats itself, Rivers explained, is so he will have a chance to improve every time.

"You just don't say, 'Been there, done that, don't want to do that again,'" said Rivers. Sleeping Man, for example, is drawn from different angles and with different expressions in each drawing. Rivers compares his repetition in his art to music.

"To me, it would be not unlike singing the same song over and over again, trying to do it better each time."

His etchings can be quite humorous. Cortona portrays a hospital scene in which two doctors are in love while patients are suffering nearby. An elephant has two rear ends in Broken Glass, which is similar to Rolling Thunder.

Others may appear to be a bit more savage. A lion eating the flesh of a naked human in Wisdom of God is on display. Other drawings of animals, such as monkeys, goats and elephants, appear in Drunken Hercules, Acting the Goat, and

by BOB VOGEL
News editor

The Education Building is no longer a risk for Legionnaires' Disease, an Orange County Health Official said Tuesday. Epidemiologist Bill Toth of the Orange County Public Health Unit said he is still waiting for the results of the tests taken on samples from the building.

Almost two weeks ago, county health workers disinfected sample sites after two cases of the disease were confirmed.

But even if the Legionella, the bacteria that causes Legionnaires' Disease, were found in the building, Toth added, there would still be no risk because workers disinfected the sample sites in the building just after the samples were taken.

"We disinfected every possible place in the building the bacteria could be found," he said. "So even if it was there, it's not anymore."

Toth said he expects the test results to be in "near the end of this week or the beginning of next week."

It takes at least 10 working days, sometimes longer, to "grow up" Legionella from a sample, Toth said. "Some bacteria are easy to cultivate, but Legionella are not," he said.

Toth also denied the existence of a third case. "[A student] has exhibited 'pneumonia-like' symptoms, but that is all," he said. "We don't have the blood work on [the student], so there really is no way to confirm it."

He also said in order to confirm individuals were exposed to the same source, he would need bacterial samples from the victims. But that would be nearly impossible because they have been treated and are no longer infected.

Jim Uhlir, assistant director for Environmental Health and Safety at UCF, said his department has received almost two dozen

Vacation to England in '88 inspires artist's work

Bouncing Betty.

Not only are drawings and etchings on exhibit, but sculptures as well. Both sculptures, called Teapot, were created by him and Rob Reed. They somewhat look like teapots, in a creative and different way.

So, what triggers the imagination to create this artwork? The precise body parts of the goat come from a sketch during a faculty meeting a few years ago. "The figures at rest come from a trip to Great Britain in 1988," said Rivers. He was in London, drawing images of a sleeping convict. The works of artists such as Henri Rousseau and Mantegna motivated him also.

Rivers believes that most art observers don't really take the time to look at art and try to understand it; they just see if they "like" it and move on. "The average time looking at art is seven seconds," he remarked.

Rivers' exhibit will be on display at UCF until April 14 and at the Maitland Art Center until April 30.

calls from students and employees since the first cases. "Some people get the sniffles, and think they have it, so we tell them to go to their family doctors," he said. "But we never hear from them again."

Toth said that many times people who think they are infected go to their doctors, who tell them it is not medically necessary to test for the disease.

The Education Building has been monitored monthly for the disease and disinfected quarterly, Toth said. The chlorine-based chemicals kill the bacteria on contact.

So if the sample tests come back positive, how did the bacteria appear? "We can't be sure," he said. He speculated about the possibility that the chemicals used to disinfect the sites may not have been used properly. But, he added, "There is no 100 percent, sure-fire method of guarding against the bacteria."

Dean McFall, director of UCF Public Affairs, said all major campus buildings have been disinfected as a precautionary measure. He added the remaining buildings, such as the portables and student services, will either be disinfected or visually inspected by Environmental Health and Safety officials. He said they should finish by the first week of April.

Cpl. Hugh Carpenter, recipient of a Top Cop award, stands by a patrol car at the UCF Police Department

MADD honors UCF Police officer for fighting against drunk driving

by KATIE JONES
Managing editor

A person's chances of getting arrested for driving around UCF while drunk or on drugs skyrockets when Cpl. Hugh Carpenter is on duty.

Carpenter, who has been a UCF police officer since 1983, is one of the department's toughest fighters against driving while under the influence of drugs or alcohol, underage drinking and the use of fake identification cards to drink.

Carpenter was rewarded for his dedication Tuesday night at the Mother's Against Drunk Driving's Law Enforcement Appreciation Awards, at the Twin Towers Convention Center in Orlando.

Chief Richard Turkiewicz nominated Carpenter to receive the award for Top Law Enforcement Officer. This was the first year UCFPD has participated in the program.

Awards were given out to officers from 21 Central Florida law enforcement agencies. A judge and two state attorneys also received awards.

Sgt. Troy Williamson, Carpenter's supervisor, accepted the award for Carpenter at the ceremony.

Williamson explained that Carpenter has always been interested in DUI enforcement since he came to UCF.

"He is the department's only drug recognition expert, which took a lot of personal time in 1994 [to go to school to earn certification]," said Williamson.

Carpenter's certification as a drug recognition expert enables him to recognize the type and classification of drugs that a person may be using.

Williamson remembered an incident two days before Christmas in 1994, when Carpenter joined seven other law enforcement agencies for a DUI checkpoint on Lee Road in Orlando.

Because of Carpenter's talent in drug recognition, he discovered that a person pulled over at the checkpoint was under the influence of cocaine.

A K-9 unit from the Orlando Police Department checked the vehicle and found marijuana and cocaine. It led to the only felony arrest that evening.

Carpenter has had 21 DUI arrests at UCF since March 1992, and made seven DUI arrests in a 4-month period in 1994.

Lt. Mike Zelan said that he is proud of Carpenter's accomplishments this year.

"He has worked very hard on the education to prevent alcohol abuse on this campus," he said.

Carpenter is a Field Training Officer who teaches DUI enforcement to new officers. He also works in plainclothes to fight underage drinking and works fraternity parties to monitor underage drinking and collect fake ID's.

Carpenter said his dedication to fighting drinking and driving comes from wanting to prevent unnecessary deaths.

"A lot of lives are lost each year [because of drunk drivers]. People die as a result of partying," he said.

Carpenter explained that even at alcohol-free parties, people may drink before the party and get in a car and drive. He always considers drunk driving a serious criminal offense and feels honored that his department chose to recognize him for his work.

Mary Ann McCunn, UCFPD's victim advocate, is glad that the department has a strong DUI policy.

McCunn, who used to be a victim advocate for MADD, said, "As a victim of a DUI, I am really glad that our police department is very serious in enforcing the DUI laws. Unfortunately, becoming a victim of a DUI driver can have lifelong ramifications."

Health professor dies at 44

by DAVE BAUER
Editor in chief

Dr. Daniel J. Crittenden, a professor with UCF's College of Health and Public Affairs for the last 11 years, died of a heart attack Monday night near the Wayne Densch Sports Complex. He was 44.

After earning his doctorate at East Carolina University, Dr. Crittenden came to UCF. He taught cardiopulmonary science.

Co-workers remember Dr. Crittenden as a friendly man.

"He was a nice fellow; he took time out to help people," said Skip Drumheller, director of cardiopulmonary sciences at UCF. "He was really well liked. We'll miss him a great deal."

Services will be held this weekend in California. A memorial for him at UCF will be held at a later date.

House considers term limits

Reuters

WASHINGTON - House Speaker Newt Gingrich said Tuesday Democrats will be to blame if a proposed constitutional amendment to limit congressional terms fails this week.

The House begins debate on the amendment Wednesday with a final vote expected later that night or Thursday. Supporters say it lacks the two-thirds majority needed for passage even though there is strong public support for it.

"As of last night, we believe 86 percent of the House Republicans are going to vote for term limits. If we get half the House Democrats we will pass a term limits constitutional amendment," Gingrich told the American Medical Association.

Republicans have a 230-204 majority with one independent in the House. The amendment would need 290 votes to pass if everyone votes.

"Passage is far from certain," said Rep. Porter Goss, R-Fla., a terms limits supporter. But he said that even voting on the measure was a victory because Democrats blocked action on it when they controlled Congress. Term limits was part of the Republicans' "Contract with America" campaign pledge.

Under procedures approved Tuesday, the House will consider four versions of the amendment. One calls for a 12-year limit on both House and Senate terms, another sets six years for representatives and 12 years for senators and a third would let states set shorter terms if they wished.

A Democratic alternative would make 12-year term limits retroactive, which would force about a third of the House and almost half the Senate to retire.

The House will take a final vote on the version that gets the most support. The amendment would also need a two-thirds vote in the Senate and approval by 38 states to be ratified.

Supporters say term limits would make Congress more responsive to the public and prevent long-term incumbents from controlling legislation. Opponents say limits will restrict the choices of voters and are not needed because members can be removed by voters at any election.

Wilson says appeal will not consider more evidence

A report submitted by independent investigator Larry Lynn said the lack of a good accounting system for the candidates and the Election Commission was a hindrance because receipts were not kept together or even stored in one location on campus. "There is no way to be sure as to when receipts were turned in to the Election Commission," Lynn said.

"Reporting format varied from candidate to candidate, election to election," Lynn continued. "By all account, the UCF SGA does not have a defined procedure for the receipt recording, and storing of campaign related expense items."

But SGA President Darin Patton was not satisfied. "This sets a bad precedent for future elections," he said. "Candidates will do the same, knowing that they'll get into office by fall anyway, even if they get caught."

Keisha Bell, who ran on Patton's ticket, filed an appeal Tuesday to Dr. Carol Wilson, the Dean of Students.

Wilson said the appeal is being reviewed "with as much expediency as is necessary." However, she added the decision will not consider the substance of the arguments made to the judicial committee but will only decide whether due process was granted and the decision made by the committee was fair.

Maybe Travolta should start shooting up chocolate

The Oscars have come and gone, and, once again, the Academy has catered to the mindless masses, giving the major awards to the "Feel Good Hit-of-the-Year."

Forrest Gump came away with the Big Three (Best Picture, Best Actor and Best Director.) Pulp Fiction, Quiz Show and the others left dejectedly, abandoned in the face of cuteness and shameless public schmoozing.

Not that this was a big surprise to anyone. Everyone knew, given past experiences, that the Academy Awards are nothing more than tasteless honors given to those who can please the masses the most and still make themselves seem somehow politically correct.

Being nominated for an Academy Award is an honor itself, but year after year, movies that are so cheesy and obviously filmed just to please the masses keep getting the Oscars, and it's really becoming a joke.

Pulp Fiction was one of the best movies out in the past five years. The writing, the acting and the directing were incredible. Anyone who saw the movie will tell you this. No one in the movie was trying to please anyone. They had a story to tell — three in fact — and each was told exceptionally well. Some moviegoers reportedly had seizures from the intense action (the needle scene).

Forrest Gump did nothing but spend two hours wandering aimlessly, showing how beautiful life is and spouting random quotes out of Life's Little Instruction Book. It couldn't decide if it was a comedy or a drama, and often crossed that fine line between laughing with the mentally challenged and laughing at them.

Pulp Fiction wasn't designed to cater to the bleeding-heart masses. Forrest Gump was. Pulp Fiction was just that, fiction — a good story to watch with a bucket of popcorn and a $5 Coke. Forrest Gump tried to bring itself off as educating the masses and showing all of us morons how beautiful life can be, especially with a below-average IQ.

I didn't see the other three movies, but I've heard that Shawshank Redemption and Quiz Show were light years beyond the happy-happy, joy-joy crap shoveled for two hours by Gump. Regardless of the acting and directing, Gump would have won just because he's so damn cute!

People need to get their heads out of the clouds and get back down to reality. Hopefully, we've gotten our fill of happy fluff for the next few years, and what few good movies actually get nominated (unlike those who get ignored, like Hoop Dreams) might get recognized for what they are.

"THE GOOD NEWS IS, RUSSIA HAS A DESIGNATED DRIVER, THE BAD NEWS IS IT'S YELTSIN."

Where better to study stupidity than here in the U.S.

Ever fell like you're the only one who has noticed something? I guess it's happened to all of us at one time or another. The first impulse is to think, "Nah, it couldn't be." Then the more thought that goes into it, the more circles go 'round like a giant calliope in your head.

Well, if it's really so, then why didn't someone else notice? Just because no one else noticed doesn't necessarily mean I'm wrong. After all, I'm looking right at it. But then, on the other hand...what if I have gone blind, only I don't know what it's like to be blind.

Then, someone else walks up and confirms your suspicion. You get all giddy inside, if for no other reason than that the mad cognitive dissonance is over. The din in your head has quieted. Then comes that laid back, "Ahhh, yes, I was right." It's a good feeling, like Haynes, makes you feel good all under.

That's what happened to me, when I saw a piece in The Orlando Sentinel's titled "A Nation of Nitwits" by Bob Herbert.

Hey, Bob! Thanks, Bob! You gave me that good-all-under feeling. You noticed the stupidity virus. Even did some leg work on it. See my smile. Sure you do.

Well, Bob, got hold of a new poll — maybe it was The American Stupidity Association or Foundation for the Advancement of Oh I Forgot or something. According to an America's Talking/Gallup Poll, we're really dumb. I don't just mean a little dumb; we're talking dumb as a door here. As my dad would say, "Ain't got the brains God gave a goat." A whopping 60 percent of Americans didn't know what president dropped the A-Bomb on Japan; 35 percent didn't know it was dropped on Hiroshima and 25 percent didn't even know it was dropped on Japan.

Even worse, 22 percent never even heard of the nuclear attack. Guess maybe they thought all the hoopla was about a Godzilla movie. Makes you wonder about the thought processes. If they didn't know anything about the bomb, in their mind, then, what was all the big deal anti-nuclear movement all about? Some whim about some weapon that's never been used? They must have thought that was dumb.

Bob got a little worked up about it, saying, "We are surrounded by a deep and abiding stupidity." I wonder if he read my article. Yes, Bob, we are surrounded by it. Maybe we could get a bunch of really big bowls with holes and straws, and sniff each other's methane, instead of hunting down a cow patty. Oh wait, maybe that's why the ozone layer is depleting — it's not the hair spray, it's the stupidity gas that rolls out of our ears.

Bob blames the brain-dulling talk shows and the movie list. But I don't think that's it. After all, I don't really think that we should have to rely on Beavis and Butthead to teach us how to think. When I tune in to Mary Tyler Moore reruns, it's not for a civics lesson.

Pat Fox FUTURE COLUMNIST

But, really, talk shows do have some redeeming features. I learn an awful lot of our national sentiments from listening to Phil, and I get to see how stupid skin-heads and KKK members look on Oprah rather frequently.

I think I'd point a finger at education. Call me a liberal or something, but the Department of Education — is it like any other oxymoron? I don't know, maybe teaching people how to think is just too much to ask. Seems to me some of those researchers' dollars that fund studies that come back and announce crap like "People who drink more than four cups of coffee a day are more likely to have high cholesterol" could be better used to study how to teach someone how to learn. Hey, all you Psych majors — there's a big niche there somewhere. Is it just me?

Maybe it's the calculators. Ya think? Could it be that, although we have a natural disdain for adding and subtracting numbers, perhaps the human brain requires a certain number for computations to be calculated in order to open certain neural pathways? It's possible. Hey, every other organ atrophies from lack of use. Maybe that's it. The entire generation that grew up with calculators in grade school are nearly brain dead.

Come to think of it, this age group is now going out, getting married and killing their spouses with un-cooked chicken. What more evidence do we need?

This would explain why even the educated people are stupid. Hey, if it were so simple as not going to school, then I could understand, but no. There are people out there that really should be having some circuit action going on. It takes a lot to make it through medical school, but damned if there are not doctors out there cutting off the wrong feet of patients. "Breakdown in communication," the hospital said. I'll say.

Just how much communication does it take to figure out which leg to cut off? Come on. Like a doctor can't tell by looking at a foot that it's either the one to go or it's not. Please. If a doctor can't visually identify a foot that needs to be cut off, then he or she probably ought to rethink the amputation.

But get a load of this: The University Community Hospital in Tampa has figured out how to prevent this from happening again. Henceforth, the word "no" will be written on the limb that gets to stay. Isn't that brilliant? I wonder what they'll do to prevent the wrong ventilator from being disconnected.

Well, we shouldn't feel too bad. We're not the only stupid nation. The Philippines are about to elect Imelda Marcos their new president. She apparently is very popular among the poorest parts of the country. Perhaps she trades them shoes for votes.

CORRECTION: Due to our opinion editor's inability to read names correctly, the column titled "Christianity Is Not the Horrible Monster Most Think" ran with Pat Fox's by-line last issue (March 28). The column was by Daly Morales. We regret the error.

2016: A celebration of 20 years of the Buchanan presidency

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A gala celebration was held in the nation's capital this week to honor President Patrick Buchanan's unprecedented sixth term as President of the United States, which begins on January 20, 2017.

Representatives from all 55 states were in attendance, including House Speaker Newt Gingrich (R-Ga.), Governor Howard Stern (L-NY), Senate Majority Leader Strom Thurmond (R-S.C.), Senator O.J. Simpson (L-Calif.) and even the three remaining Congressional Democrats: Representative Ed Tyll (D-Fla.); Representative Patrick Stewart (D-Ont.); and Senator Edward Kennedy (D-Mass).

The reactions ranged from the ecstatic to the outraged. Vice President David Duke called the victory "a reaffirmation of the confidence that the American people have in the current administration and the strides that have been made in restoring the United Christian States of America to its former glory."

Rush Limbaugh, director of the Ministry of Truth, simply stated, "I told you people this would happen. I was right once again." Congratulatory messages were read from European Community President Mikhail Gorbachev, Ministry of Education Director Dan Quayle, Supreme Court Justice Lance Ito and even Cuban President Fidel Castro.

Not everyone, though, was pleased. Rep. Ed Tyll had to be escorted away from the White House as he yelled vulgar epithets at the President and Vice President. Mexican governor Ross Perot wanted to know when his state would receive funding to help deal with the large number of black and other minorities who were relocated to Mexico as part of President Buchanan's Heritage Restoration Act of 2008. He further challenged President Buchanan to tear down the electromagnetic barrier that separated Mexico from the rest of the UCS, but Buchanan declined to comment.

Vice President Duke reassured Governor Perot that plans were being prepared to deal with the minority problem "once and for all." House Speaker Newt Gingrich called this election, "The culmination of the Republican Revolution of the 1990's, which began with the 'Contract With America' and President Buchanan's defeat of Bill Clinton in the election of 1996."

Dan Griffin THE LIBERAL MEDIA

A retrospective of the first 20 years was held at the Smithsonian Institute, highlighting what the President likes to view as the high points of his career:

- The elimination of the Cabinet system, their departments and all government agencies, such as the CIA, FBI and EPA, and their replacement with the five Ministries: Truth, Justice, Education, Freedom and Public Welfare.

- The passage of the No Term Limits provision of the Contract With America. This allowed President Buchanan

While Judaism is still allowed to be practiced, Islam and all other faiths were outlawed. Many practitioners of those religions chose to return to ancestral countries rather than be arrested.

to run for more than two terms. Sen. Kennedy told reporters afterward that this provision was never a part of the Contract, but Ministry of Truth director Limbaugh produced original copies of various newspapers from the late 1990's that contradict the Senator's statement. "Even 20 years later, the Democrats are still incapable of telling the truth," the director said with a smile.

- The passage of the National Religion Act of 2002, which declared Christianity the country's official religion and changed the nation's name to the United Christian States of America. It also nullified the freedom of religion protection of the First Amendment. While Judaism is still allowed to be practiced, Islam and all other faiths were outlawed. Many practitioners of those religions chose to return to ancestral countries rather than be arrested. According to Ministry of Justice director Pat Robertson, "The multi-cultural brainwashing of the 1990's left us with no other choice. People were forgetting this great nation's heritage, and something had to be done to preserve the values that we hold dear."

- The Sanctuary Compassion Act of 2004 (with apologies to Star Trek: Deep Space Nine): This legislation consisted of walling off decayed urban centers in major metropolitan cities, such as Miami, Chicago, Los Angeles, New York City, etc. With the repeal of welfare and Social Security, the poor and the homeless had become a major problem that citizens demanded the government solve. The solution was relocating all homeless and jobless people to these Sanctuaries, where they would be given food, shelter and job training to help them rejoin decent society. No figures were available on the exact number of people helped.

- The Minority Relocation Act of 2007. With the success of the Sanctuary program, legislation was introduced to solve the problem of illegal immigration. The remaining non-white left in the UCS after the National Religion Act were relocated to the State of Mexico (annexed in 2005) and a newly developed electromagnetic barrier was installed between the state and the rest of the nation.

- The Sexual Morals Act of 2008. Spearheaded by Ministry of Justice director Robertson, based on 1990's proposals of the late Senator Jesse Helms, homosexuality was declared a federal offense, punishable by death. According to Vice President Duke, "As we all know, gays chose to be the way they were, and with the AIDS epidemic being what it was, it was the only rational course of action."

By 2014, all gays had been incarcerated and summarily executed. Duke further states that with their "despicable influence" eradicated, there would never be another gay person in America or another case of AIDS. Statistics released by the Ministry of Truth confirm this.

At the conclusion, President Buchanan thanked the crowd for their support. He and Vice President Duke promised that even more programs would make their way through Congress that further enrich the lives of the American people and be in the great tradition of conservative Republicanism.

Moonpies and the Madman

SOME TRULY UNIQUE
PERSPECTIVES ON THIS CRAZY BUSINESS CALLED LIFE..

by DEREK KRAUSE

Journey with me into the mind of a film maniac. A filmboy.

Seven for 7. Yes, some final commentary on the golden night of Hollywood — ACCURACY. Not to brag too much, but I went just plain silly-psyche on you folks. I wasn't surprised in the least about the turn out, and... well I had a wacky suspicion that Gump-mania might go a little ballistic.

As for Mr. Oscar— The show. Thanks: To America's favorite smart-ass for representin' Hoop Dreams as No. 6 on his Top 10, for Barry White's Cabin Boy audition and to Steven Spielberg for pronouncing Krzysztof Kieslowski's name correctly. No thanks: To Paul Newman for not mentioning Red, and to Winona Ryder for bringing that Soul Asylum geek to the party.

It's bad enough they didn't get nominated for picture or documentary but pleeeeeease Eddie, at least give Gates and Agee the editing award.

Are Spalding Gray and Arthur Hiller twins? What's up with Legends of the Fall snagging cinematography? If not Red then at least Gump. Talk about buying out Mr. Oscar— what a load of daydreaming.

I apologize for not pitching my penny-and-a-half in for Best Foreign Film— normally I'm all over it like gold on a statue. But, I have only seen two of the films, so it would've been a bit unprofessional to comment on it. By the way, one of the films I saw was the 1995 Oscar winner for Best Foreign Film — Burnt by the Sun.

For you fellow film maniacs, I'll be milking my sorrows over the end of the most fulfilling week of cinema at the Tank Girl screening tonight. However, I'm sure Lori Petty will not fail to help me forget how much of a potential horror it can be going to the theater.

Green is Hollywood's favorite color.

*1/2 Tommy Boy

The potential for a Farley-fest was there. Instead, a few quality, laughing outbursts is all that accompanied this mediocre effort for spin-off sarcasm.

After Tommy boy's Dad, the president of an auto parts company, dies, his son, Tommy boy [Chris Farley] is the only one that can save the town. So Farley and his square executive partner (David Spade), go on a cross-country selling spree.

With an interesting supporting cast including Dan Akroyd, Bo Derek, Brian Dennehy and Mr. SNL spin-off villain himself, Rob Lowe, Tommy Boy is dominated by its Billy Madison takeoff script. The only clever part of the script was its child-like references to other films— Ace Ventura: Pet Detective, Fast Times at Ridgemont High, Flashdance, National Lampoon's Vacation, Planes, Trains and Automobiles, Return of the Jedi and 10.

By using these other cult flicks, Tommy Boy craftily curved the typical punchline to a more satisfying level. I very much enjoyed the white bathing suit beauty (vintage Christie Brinkley) posing at pool's edge as Spade (vintage Judge Reinhold) peered out his hotel window. What followed seemed like Farley's most comfortable moment as he interrogated Spade about what he was actually doing in the window ("Buddy Wackett, Spanky from The Little Rascals, spanktivision, the Yankees?"). Figure it out.

The potential for Farley to surge into the god of hilarity sits at the tip of a few writers' fingers. Tommy Boy isn't it, but if someone lets his physical comedy flow and gives him a film to let loose in, Farley could create a figure equal to Steve Martin, Eddie Murphy and Robin Williams.

— Just when you think Tom Hanks had his final teary, acceptance speech, here comes Apollo 13 this summer.

— A touch of video — Robert Altman's Vincent and Theo. Tim Roth almost duplicates the likeness of Vincent van Gogh. Check out the whole ear-slicing scene. Then think about Reservoir Dogs?

— K-R-Z-Y-S-Z-T-O-F Kieslowski

31 March — Born to be Wild, Circle of Friends, Tank Girl, Tommy Boy, Tom and Viv,

P.J. Harvey Brings You Her Love

If you have experienced the raw, true and powerful music of Polly Jane Harvey, her latest release To Bring You My Love will be an adjustment. Although a departure from her past work, it is the most original and striking album I have picked up this year.

Harvey's first two albums are comprised of poignant power pop that cuts right to the chase of sexual, social and internal conflict, painting a picture that anyone can relate to. Unlike Dry and Rid Of Me, Polly Jane's newest release is more of solo project.

P.J. Harvey formed in Sommerset, England, midway through 1991. After releasing two successful singles, "Dress" and "Sheel-na-Gig," Polly Jane and the band signed on with British indie Too-Pure (which was recently acquired by American Recordings.) Their debut, Dry, gained acclaim from practically every critic that gave the fair disc a spin. Some of the most impressive honors came from the pages of Rolling Stone. Their critic's picks bestowed the honors of "Best New Female Singer" and "Best Songwriter" as well as top-10 recognition from The New York Times and The Village Voice.

The 1993 follow up, Rid Of Me was produced by God, excuse me, Steve Albini. This divine intervention did not hurt the rolling press machine that stamped Rid Of Me one of the best releases of the year.

With the latest record, Polly Jane enlisted the ranks of John Parrish and production wiz Flood. To Bring You My Love is a big, a giant departure from the guitars that run rampant on her first two efforts. The biggest change has been that this is sweet Polly Jane's first solo record. Instead of pursuing rock and roll, P.J. ended up with an avant garde journey into every genre of music around. This album is difficult to describe in words because of its diversity. To Bring You My Love is a collection of incredible songs that hold all the qualities of Dry and Rid Of Me, but a totally different approach with violins, violas, drum machines is used to create a timeless piece of art.

THE RAMBLINGS OF AN EVERYDAY SHOEGAZER

Normally there is a column from me (Jim Martin) in this space, but I couldn't mention the Student Government and P.J. Harvey in the same article and live with myself.

I'm getting really sick of this whole Student Government thing. If I didn't work here, I wouldn't even waste my time keeping up with the whole fiasco, but since I do...I would like to express my complete lack of respect for the Darin Patton camp. He was just a little frat boy building his resume, and I don't have much of a problem there.

Where I do have a problem is in his bed-wetting antics. His worst nightmare came true and he has become a pissy little civilian like the rest of us. Look at the bright side, Darin, now you have the rest of your life to discover what everyone already knows. In the words of Ace Ventura, "You are a lo-ooo-oo-ser."

As a microcosm of his stupidity, he's holding a forum to tell us why tuition is going up; maybe part of that tuition is the free pizza that is being served. (DUH) And before the entire chapter of Alpha Do Me calls in protest, I've wasted enough time already. So just let Torregossa/Amoros rightfully take over SG and stop wetting your pants.

BOYZ II MEN SMOOVIN' ALONG

by SEAN PERRY
Features editor

From Barry Manilow to Nirvana, I have witnessed the broad spectrum of popular music in their proving grounds... live.

I have traveled to the backwoods of Lakeland and grasped at Cobain's last stand, and dressed like a rich man for Manilow's newest gimmick at the Bob Carr Auditorium. However, the event that took place at the Orlando Arena last Saturday night was one of everlasting impression.

Four young gentlemen strolled onto stage and proceeded, to detail, popular rhythm and soul for over 50 minutes.

Obviously, the headliner did not want to face any competition with the opening act, so some mediocre performers/Shaq-pleasers came out for 30 minutes to warm up the crowd.

The foursome that have sold more than 10 million albums over the last few years, hit the elaborate setting with some form of hip-hop tune that I wasn't truly familiar with. Although it took entirely too long for them to settle into their comfortable confines of a capella and soft-hearted soul, they finally established a groove.

The band, comprised of a guitarist that held his own on a scat composition, as well as the funky soul numbers, along with two drummers and a keyboardist helped to add to the live performance.

Although the group of adolescent black men refused to acknowledge their assisting performers throughout the show, they at least nodded to them at times.

It is as obvious that Boyz II Men enjoy being themselves, just as it is obvious that 10,000 young girls enjoy Boyz II Men being themselves, as well.

Nothing can take away from the performance, though. A form of music that was almost abandoned due to the Milli Vanilli swing of the '80s suddenly has been brought back to life.

These kids used every bit of showmanship, stage effects and live energy possible to establish a feeling and emotion worth the 35 bills every poor soul had to fork over for the lower bowl entrance fee.

They brought down the catwalk in order to get closer to the audience and sing their lullabies. More potent bands would probably just have stage-dived like Cypress Hill, but to each his own.

They also used the lovey-dovey candle effect, as well as the tossing-out-roses effect—many simple things that Jon Bon Jovi used to do on a nightly basis. These, however, are original in a form of music that only finds individuals boasting of their "bump and grind" efforts.

I have seen it all on the concert scene, from McCartney to Dylan to Pearl Jam, and I must admit, these kids put on a show.

One day, when I speak of Mike Tyson and Boyz II Men, my kids will ask "Is that Malik Azeez and the Isley Brothers?"

Jordan scores 55 points against N.Y.

Reuters

NEW YORK — Michael Jordan scored an NBA season-high 55 points and hit Bill Wennington with a perfect pass under the hoop for the winning basket Tuesday as the Chicago Bulls edged the New York Knicks, 113-111.

Scottie Pippen inbounded to Jordan with 14.6 seconds remaining. Jordan dribbled the length of the court and, as he was driving by John Starks and into the lane, Patrick Ewing came over to double team, leaving Wennington wide open for a pass from Jordan and a dunk with 3.1 seconds left to win the game.

Jordan hit 21-of-37 shots, including 3-of-4 from three-point range, and 10-of-11 from the free throw line to break the previous high of 53 for the NBA this season set by Willie Burton of the Philadelphia 76ers against Miami Heat on December 13.

Pippen collected 19 points, nine rebounds and eight assists and B.J. Armstrong scored 16 points as the Bulls won their second straight game.

Jordan had 49 points after three quarters and the game was tied, 82-82. New York held a 90-89 lead when Scottie Pippen hit a three-pointer to ignite a 10-0 run that gave Chicago a 99-90 lead with 7:32 remaining.

Ewing then scored the next eight points in a 1:50 span to cut the score to 99-98 with 5:42 remaining. Ewing finished with 36 points, including 27 in the second half.

Will Perdue, Corie Blount and Jordan made the next three baskets to put Chicago ahead, 105-98. The Knicks then went on a 9-2 run to tie the game, 107-107. Ewing blocked a shot by Jordan and John Starks got the ball on a fast break and jammed it home to tie the game.

Pippen then took a pass from Jordan and banked in a shot to give Chicago a 109-107 lead with 56 seconds left.

Ewing hit a pair of free throws to tie the game again at 109-109 with 30 seconds left.

Jordan set a season-high for points when he hit a 10-foot jumper over Starks as Chicago grabbed a 111-109 lead with 25 seconds left.

Starks drew a foul from Perdue with just over 14 seconds left and hit both free throws to tie the game for the final time.

Police: Cocaine did not kill Reggie Lewis

Reuters

BOSTON — The chief medical examiner investigating the death of Reggie Lewis said cocaine did not cause the death of the former Boston Celtics captain.

"The office of the chief medical examiner, after interviewing medical consultants used in the analysis of the Reggie Lewis autopsy, has determined that Reggie Lewis' death was not caused by cocaine ingestion," Dr. Richard Evans said Tuesday.

Nor was the damage to the heart at all typical of that known to be caused by cocaine usage.

"I would reiterate that toxicology screens performed at the time of death found no evidence of cocaine or other drug abuse," he added. "The office stands by its official determination of the cause and manner of the death of Reggie Lewis."

The investigation by state police in connection with the office of the chief medical examiner into the Lewis autopsy remains closed.

"I'm satisfied with the comprehensive nature of the original autopsy and the thoroughness of this subsequent review in the wake of the Wall Street Journal report," said Kathleen O'Tool, public safety secretary.

"I am convinced that (Doctor Evans) exhausted every option, including the use of experts to arrive at an accurate cause of death.

"Our task has not been to determine if Reggie Lewis used drugs, but to determine as conclusively as possible what caused his death."

Lewis had his number 35 retired by the Celtics last week amid persistent allegations of cocaine use by the deceased star.

The ceremony came just hours after The Boston Herald reported that Lewis regularly used cocaine before home games and ignored a warning from doctors that the drug could kill him.

The Herald quoted an unnamed medical source as saying Lewis was a heavy user of cocaine and continued to use the drug after collapsing during a playoff game in April, 1993.

Lewis died of heart failure in July, 1993.

UCF rugby proves further dominance

other two sides," said UCF senior rugby star Rich Germann. "We had to go with two UM (Miami) backs, and they got the job done, but they're just not as good as our guys are."

Florida now moves to the championship game Sunday against Georgia, who also advanced with a first round victory. Florida had a tougher time of it against Georgia, winning only 20-18. However, it was good enough to earn them the title of Southeastern All Star Champions.

"We kept beating them (Georgia), but then we would let them right back in the game," Germann said. "We never should have let the game get that close because we're simply a much better team."

Winning the state championships, and now winning the all-star competition has proven just that.

This all-star game signifies the end to many illustrious rugby careers here at UCF, but the next big rugby star with a funny nickname could be you. For more information on becoming a member, call rugby club president Chap Dinkins at 678-5367 or vice president Archie Dellano at 282-4889.

The Golden Knights embarrass Rollins, 11-3, to take series lead

by MARC LOYD
Staff writer

UCF head baseball coach Jay Bergman and his Golden Knights of the diamond regained bragging rights Tuesday night with an 11-3 victory over cross-town rival Rollins College Tars.

Sophomore pitcher Brian Gomes extended two streaks Tuesday night. He extended his unblemished record to 5-0, and in the process helped the Golden Knights reach their 16th consecutive win.

"They're scoring lots of runs, and that takes a lot of pressure off me. All I have to do is throw strikes," Gomes said.

Going into the bottom of the fourth with a 4-0 lead, thanks to a two-run double by rightfielder Adam Johnson, new staff ace Gomes found himself in his first dilemma of the night.

With two runs already in, runners on first and second and only one out, Gomes showed great poise and got the next two Tars to ground out and strike out.

Designated hitter Brad King put away what little hope Rollins had, with a three-run blast over the left field wall sparking a four-run fifth inning.

With 16 wins in a row and a No. 22 ranking in Baseball America's poll, you wonder how coach Bergman is keeping his players in check.

"They're just real determined, and they know what they have to do to win ball games; it's not time to get bigheaded. We have too much in front of us," Bergman said.

Bergman is just six wins shy of career win No. 700. Bergman has posted an overall record of 694-414-3 (.626) in 19 seasons as a collegiate coach.

The Golden Knights will host Centenary this Friday evening at 7 p.m.

"They know what they have to do to win ball games; it's not time to get bigheaded..."

— Coach Jay Bergman

Sophomore George Betancourt has helped the Golden Knights bolster their infield this season. UCF has now won 16 games in a row.

Tennis anyone?

Jesper Kjoraas, the 6-5 senior from Sweden, has a 12-6 overall record this season. The UCF mens' tennis team is also having a stellar season at 17-3.

Rogers named as UCF's new SID

□ Former head of sports information at Centenary joins UCF's team as an assistant director.

by JUSTIN DELIAS
Assistant sports editor

As the University of Central Florida readies itself for the big move to Division I-A in football, UCF athletic director Steve Sloan has hired Cory Rogers as assistant sport's information director to help with all the extra work.

What does a sports information director do, and why is the job important? The position is essential to the members of the media who count on this person for all the results.

The sports information director faxes results as well as reminders of upcoming UCF sporting events. The director also arranges all press conferences and prepares the little packets of information that the media receive, and put together all the media guides too. Basically, the director is the person who makes sure the school gets press by feeding the information to the media.

Rogers, 24, comes to UCF from Centenary College of Louisiana, where he spent the last two years as their sports information director.

Rogers feels that the move to Orlando will be good for him and his family, even though UCF is also in the Trans-American Athletic Conference.

"It's a larger school. It's going to be I-A in football soon, which is something I didn't really get at Centenary," Rogers said. "It's a great opportunity, and I couldn't let it pass me."

Orlando also presents more opportunities for Rogers' wife, who coaches tennis. It also played a part in his decision to move from Louisiana.

Rogers graduated from Centenary with a bachelor's degree in liberal arts and served as the sports information student assistant before being promoted to full-time employment.

Rogers will assist UCF sports information director John Marini in all 14 men's and women's sports.

"I just want to do my job the best I can," Rogers added. "I'm real excited."

The Florida rugby all-stars beat up on their southern brothers

by JASON SWANCEY
Sports editor

The Florida all-stars pounded their competition and often blanked the opposition this past weekend at an all-star rugby competition.

UCF was well represented, as the winning Florida team consisted of 10 UCF players, five from the University of Miami and two from Florida Atlantic University. There was also one player representing Embry Riddle.

The weekend gala kicked off Saturday when the Florida all-stars shut out the Palmetto all-stars, 28-0. The UCF-led squad quickly got rid of the team made up of members from both North and South Carolina.

"We had a better team than the
